OECD Chief Economist

ORGANISATION
FOR ECONOMIC
CO-OPERATION
AND DEVELOPMENT

The OECD main objective is to contribute to a better functioning of the world economy. It is a unique forum where governments work together to address the economic, social and governance challenges of the globalizing world economy. We are one of the world's largest publishers in the fields of economics and public policy. The OECD Chief Economist plays a prominent part in strengthening OECD's role in the field of economic policy in order to contribute effectively to achieving the strategic objectives.

The Chief Economist of the OECD aims at enhancing economic performance in the countries it works with through sound and innovative advice, deals with a wide array of policy areas from macro-economic management to structural policy issues and provides leadership and vision to the OECD's work in the field of economic policy.

The future Chief Economist of the OECD holds an advanced university degree in economics, has extensive and senior-level experience in formulating and implementing policy to support economic performance, as well as detailed knowledge of the different economic performance and institutional settings across OECD and non-OECD member countries. The incumbent benefits from a recognized track record of intellectual leadership and well-established contacts in the academic community and has significant experience of operating within a policy-focused decision-making environment. The future Chief Economist of the OECD will also provide strategic direction to the work of the Economics Department and will have strong management skills and proven ability to motivate and direct a multidisciplinary and multicultural team.

The individual will report directly to the Secretary-General and will work in close co-operation with directors throughout the Organisation.
